Greetings!

In preparation for the Holiday season, here is the Scottish Gaelic version of "Silent Night":

Sàmhach an oidhch', naomha an oidhch'
Saoghal 'na chadal; 's a-mach bho ar soills'
Moire is Iòseph an stàball fàs
Faire os cionn an Leinibh le gradh,
Cadal gu nèamhaidh sèimh,
Cadal gu nèamhaidh sèimh.

Guess Who?

Campbells Shortbreads, one of our most popular Christmas Treats, are back in stock!

Campbell's bakery was started by Donald Campbell in 1830 in the small village of Callander in Perthshire. Over 170 years later, still owned by the same family, the Campbell's Bakery is Scotland's oldest independent family run bakery. Ownership has been passed down through 6 generations of Campbells.

Until the 1960s, it was a small bakery serving the surrounding communities with delivery vans. As the years went by, their popularity continued to grow. Shortbread was seen as a Scottish ethnic product, like Whisky. Many mass grocery markets began factory production of shortbread wiping out many of the small traditional family craft bakeries. Only Campbell's and one other survived, and both are now thriving.

Now, Campbell's mostly concentrates on gift and seasonal lines, using the finest ingredients for the highest quality products. They built a new shortbread bakery in the 1990's with automated machinery to produce higher volumes of the product, while maintaining their high quality. They have expanded to an increasing international market.

For those who don't know, shortbread is a type of biscuit that is made of one part white sugar, two parts butter, and three parts white flour. It is named for its crumbly texture, caused by the quantity of shortening. It has a sweet buttery taste and is great for dunking in Christmas drinks.

It is traditionally formed into three shapes: Petticoat Tails, when a large circle is divided into segments as soon as it is taken out of the over, Shortbread Rounds, individual round biscuits, or Fingers, a thick oblong piece sliced into smaller "fingers". The stiff dough helps it to retain its shape during cooking.

So come by Clans to pick up some Campbell's Shortbread for your holiday celebrations!

Who Am I?

Born in Kirriemuir, Angus, Scotland in May 1860, I was the 9th of 10 children to my parents. The death of one of my older brothers had a great influence on the rest of my life.

I spent time at the University of Edinburgh and then moved to London, writing as often as I could. The first appearance of my most well known character came in "The Little White Bird" in 1901. Although I was married, I spent much of my time with a friend and her 5 sons. They were the inspiration for my greatest success. The first big performance of this play was in 1904 and it has since been adapted into films, musicals, ballets and more.

The adventure and fantasy in my most successful play really hooks the audience. There is a statue of my title character in a park that I frequently visited with friends who, like me, refused to grow up. The copyright to my most famous play has gone to a great cause. Live performances of this play never fail to get the entire audience clapping at one particular scene.

Those closest to me called me "Uncle Jimmy". Many of them died at a young age.

In June 1937, I too embarked on an "awfully big adventure".

The Best Legs in Kilt Competition was held at Women's World on Oct. 18th. Ten contestants strutted their stuff in front of our judges, Tiffany Paulson, Shaina Swidrovich, and Michelle Volk. Some danced, some sang, some played the pipes. The winner was Brad Fenty, second place was Jim Boswell, and third place went to Ron McLean. A great time was had by all. Thanks to all of our contestants. Here is a video of some of the highlights.
